The atrD polymolecutide is used to produce nucleic acid molecules which are useful in diagnostic assays for the detection of atrD polymolecutides. The atrD polypeptide may be used to identify agents which inhibit multiple drug resistance. These agents may be useful for the treatment of fungal diseases. New antifungal compounds may also be identified using the gene disruption or gene replacement

The specification describes a method whereby cultured transformed fungal cells are used to determine the multiple drug inhibition activity of a compound. The method is useful for providing nucleic acid molecules which encode multiple drug resistance proteins from Aspergillus fumigatus (Afu) which are useful for determining the MDR inhibition of a compound.

The method is used for enhancing the production and secretions of beta-lactam antibiotics like penicillin and cephalosporins Manipulation of the ABC-transport protein system provides a means for enhancing beta-lactam secretion. The present sequence represents the P. chrysogenum ABC transporter aal0 protein sequence.

Afl-MDR1 can be synthesised by host cells, partic. Saccharomyces cerevisiae, transformed with vectors that provide for the expression of DNA encoding Afl-MDR1. Transformed host cells can be used to identify cpds. that inhibit fungal MDR activity.

lactam compounds from a micro-organism that comprises enhancing ABC (adenosine triphosphate (ATP)-binding cassette) transporter activity of the micro-organism. The method is used for enhancing the production and secretions of beta-lactam antibiotics like penicillin and cephalosporins.
Manipulation of the ABC-transport protein system provides a means for enhancing beta-lactam secretion. The present sequence represents the

M1 is useful for assaying for compounds that interact with mammalian (human, mouse, hamster, monkey or rabbit) PG, especially PG obtained from a multidrug-resistant cell line (e.g., multidrug resistant Chinese hamster ovary cell line CHRBBO) or PG obtained from heterologous

(b) identifying compounds that are high affinity PG mod
(c) determining if a compound may be dangerous if used

Pgp1 is an integral membrane protein, energy dependent efflux pump responsible for decrease drug accumulation in multidrug-resistant cells.

The invention is used as vaccine. An antibody specific for the mutant P-glycoprotein is useful for determining whether a human tumour sample comprises tumour cells expressing mutant human P-glycoprotein. A recombinant expression construct comprising nucleic acid encoding mutant P-glycoprotein is useful for administering an increased amount of a chemotherapeutic agent to an individual with cancer, by transducing ex vivo haematopoietic cells from the individual with the recombinant
